
Name It.
Voice It.
Release It.

A Shame Release Process for Women

Write it. Speak it. Witness it. Let your body let it go.

A Letter to You

Shame is one of the heaviest things a woman can carry, and one of the most silent. It hides deep in the body. For some women it lives in the chest, the belly, the womb, the throat, the hips. It finds its home differently in each of us. And it quietly shapes every decision you make about money, love, your voice, and your worth.

This is not a worksheet that asks you to think your way out of shame. It asks you to move it. Through writing, through your voice, through your body, and through the sacred act of being witnessed.

You do not need to have it all figured out. You do not need to be ready. You only need a few quiet minutes, an open heart, and the willingness to let something old finally leave. You deserve to be free. Begin by opening the container with a simple intention.

My intention in creating this was to give you a starting point. A place to begin releasing one layer. I do not expect a lifetime of shame to be lifted in one sitting. Think of it as a beginning.

If you are anything like me, maybe you are just getting started. Or maybe you are unpacking another layer, with all the abuse surfacing on the planet right now. I have unpacked shame for years, layer by layer. Each time I had to bring awareness to it, name it, and give it voice.

This is a way to begin to give yourself the gift of liberating the generational shame women have been taught to keep and stay silent in.

NO MORE. WE ARE THE ONES WE HAVE WAITED FOR. AND YOUR FUTURE SELF IS CELEBRATING YOU NOW.

Once you move through shame, you can have a tremendous amount of energy return. Creation energy. Anger. Life force. Highly recommend that you move your body in all the ways that nourish you as it releases. Walking, shaking, dancing, screaming, growling to help it expel. Allow yourself to take up ALL the space.

We need to be our own permission granters when it comes to taking up space. Shame keeps us small. It is time the little girl that lives in you has an adult who champions for her to be seen, heard, and loved.

How to Use This Worksheet

Work through each of the steps in order. You may complete this in one sitting or spread it across a few hours, a few days, or even weeks. Allow the time and space you need to be with this.

COMMIT TO YOURSELF ONCE YOU OPEN THIS that you will turn towards yourself. Name it and claim your freedom. Give yourself privacy, warmth, and grace. There is no wrong way to do this work.

RELEASE

01

Name It

The thing about shame is it hides deep in our body. We often mask it so well that we don't even know it's there. Or we know something is wrong but cannot find the words. It is possible you have layers to your shame. That is okay. We begin here, with one layer at a time.

Let's begin with being afraid to be heard or seen. The shame of visibility. This is a beginning point that plagues many women, even those who cannot fully remember or feel what they are ashamed of. It is a safe place to start.

Before You Begin: Come Into Your Body

Place one hand on your heart and one hand on your womb. Close your eyes if it feels safe. Take three slow breaths. This is the full feminine container, heart and womb together. Let your body know you are here, you are listening, and it is safe to speak now.

With your hands still on your heart and womb, answer as honestly as you can. There are no wrong answers. No one else will read this unless you choose to share it.

BEGIN HERE

❖ If you could name one thing you are holding in shame right now, even if it feels incomplete or unclear, what would it be? If you have several things, feel free to write them all down. Then place your hand on your womb and notice which one takes up the most space in you, feels the heaviest, or is asking to move. Begin there.

FIND IT IN THE BODY

❖ If you knew where your shame lives in your body, where would you name it? A tightness, a heaviness, a hollowness. Where do you feel it?

TRACE ITS ROOTS

◆ If you knew what your shame was connected to, your mother, your father, an abuser, a moment, what would come forward? You do not need certainty. Let whatever surfaces be enough.

THE MASK YOU WEAR

◆ How do you hide this shame from the world? What do you do, say, or become so that no one sees it?

WHAT IT HAS COST YOU

◆ How has carrying this shame affected the way you show up in your relationships, your voice, your money, your body, your visibility?

02

Voice It

Shame lives in silence. The moment you speak it aloud, even to yourself, the nervous system begins to register that you are safe. Your voice is medicine.

Find a private space. Open your Voice Memos app or any recording tool on your phone. Press record. And speak what you wrote in Step 1 out loud.

If you are ready for the most powerful version of this step — record a video of yourself. Seeing your own face while speaking shame out loud directly confronts the hiding that shame depends on. Visibility is the antidote. You do not need to share it with anyone. This video is for you and your liberation alone.

How to Record

- Voice Memo (audio): open the Voice Memos app and press record. Simple and private.
- Video (most powerful): use your front camera. Look into your own eyes as you speak.
- You do not need to perform. You do not need to sound strong.
- Crying is welcome. Pausing is welcome. Stumbling over words is welcome.
- Simply speak what is true. That is enough.
- The act of speaking it is the release, not the playback.

After recording, place one hand on your heart and one hand on your womb. Breathe slowly into both spaces. Your heart holds what you have expressed. Your womb holds what your body has been protecting. Notice what has shifted, even the smallest thing. Write it here:

03

Witness It

We heal in relationship. Shame tells us we are uniquely broken and that no one must ever know. Sharing with one safe person dismantles that lie completely.

This is not about oversharing or performing vulnerability. It is about choosing one trusted person, a friend, a therapist, a sister, and letting them simply hear you.

Who is your safe witness?

Think of one person in your life who holds space without judgment. You don't need to share everything. Even one sentence is enough.

.....

.....

What would you want them to simply hear?

.....

.....

.....

If You Are Not Ready to Share Yet

That is okay. Write a letter to a future version of yourself — the woman who has already released this shame — and let her be your witness for now. Your time will come.

04

Release It: The Ritual

The body holds what the mind has processed. To complete this release, we bring it into the physical. Through water, plant allies, breath, and sacred intention.

Your Plant Allies

Frankincense

Burn resin or diffuse the oil to open sacred space before you begin. It clears the energy field and signals to your nervous system that something holy is happening here.

Calendula

The flower of courage and authentic expression. Add to your bath or hold in your hands while you voice your shame. She supports you in being seen.

Rose

Opens the heart and releases shame held in the chest. Rose petals or rose water in your bath invite deep emotional softening.

Lavender

Calms the nervous system so your body feels safe enough to let go. Shame lives in tension and lavender creates the safety needed for release.

Rosemary

Purification and restoration of self. Use at the close of the ritual to seal what has been released and reclaim your clarity.

Use What You Have. Trust What You Are Guided To.

These are suggested plant allies, not requirements. Use what you have, what calls to you, or simply what smells like healing to you. Your intention is more powerful than any ingredient. If all you have is a warm bath and a candle, that is enough. Trust what you are guided to use.

The Shame Release Bath Ritual

1. Prepare the Space

Light frankincense resin or diffuse the oil. Let it fill the room. Set an intention aloud: "I am here to release what I have been carrying. I am safe. I am ready."

2. Complete Steps 1 to 3 First

Do the writing and the voice recording before you draw the bath. Let the words leave your body through pen and voice first.

3. Draw Your Bath

Add your chosen plant allies, calendula petals, rose, lavender, rosemary. Or simply salted warm water with intention. As the bath fills, speak aloud: "I release what was never mine to carry."

4. Enter as One Woman, Exit as Another

As you lower into the water, imagine everything you named in Step 1 leaving your body and dissolving into the water around you. Breathe slowly. Simply let the water hold you.

5. The Breath Release

Before you exit: inhale deeply through the nose for 4 counts, hold for 4, exhale slowly through the mouth for 8. Repeat three times. On each exhale, imagine the shame leaving through your breath.

6. Move Your Body

After the bath: shake your hands, roll your shoulders, walk barefoot if possible. Even two minutes of movement helps discharge what has been stirred.

7. Close the Ritual

Place one hand on your heart. Speak: "I release what was never mine to carry. I reclaim my body. I reclaim my worth. I am enough. I always was." Extinguish any candles. The ritual is complete.

After the Release

Give yourself time before returning to your regular day. Drink water. Eat something nourishing. Be gentle with yourself. You just did something most people never do.

Closing Reflections

❖ After completing this process, I feel...

❖ Something I want to remember about this experience is...

❖ The woman I am becoming on the other side of this shame is...

❖ One way I will honour myself this week is...

"Shame cannot survive being spoken. It cannot survive empathy." — Brené Brown

You are not your shame. You never were. Welcome to the other side.

This is only the beginning.

What you have initiated here is real. And if you felt something move — even the smallest shift — there are deeper levels of this work available to you.

1:1 Shame Healing Sessions

If you are ready to release deeper layers of shame, I offer private one-to-one healing sessions. This is an energetic transmission designed to bring creation energy back into the womb space, flooding the body with light after you have initiated release.

Where two or more are gathered, healing is amplified. Working together activates deeper cellular and DNA levels of healing that are not always accessible alone. This is not just a conversation. It is a transmission.

Reach out to book your session and take this work all the way home.

More offerings are coming soon. Stay close.